BILL FOLEY
CHAIRMAN, CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER AND GOVERNOR

Bill Foley knew that bringing an NHL franchise to Las Vegas was not going to be an easy task, but his persistence paid off on June 22, 2016. While that day will go down in history as the first day a major professional team entered the market, it would not have happened without the hard work from Foley and the people he surrounded himself with.

In the years leading up to the Board of Governor's announcement of the NHL's 31st franchise, Foley, the Vegas Golden Knights Chairman and CEO was busy engaging the fan base and aligning himself with prominent people in the community. In early 2014, he entered an agreement with the Maloof family to pursue an NHL franchise in Las Vegas. At the end of 2014, the NHL granted Foley permission to gauge fan interest in Las Vegas.

On February 15, 2015, Foley and the Maloofs launched the "Vegas Wants Hockey" season ticket drive with the goal of 10,000 season tickets sold. They received more than 5,000 ticket deposits on the first day and about a month later, they reached their goal. In June, the NHL officially announced they would accept applications for expansion. Less than a month later Foley had submitted his application. He would spend the next 11 months meeting with NHL officials and governors on why Las Vegas was a good fit.

After the expansion was announced, Foley went to work putting together his team. He named George McPhee the team's first General Manager on July 13, 2016, and the hockey operations staff started to take form. On October 3, 2016, Kerry Bubolz was named the team's first President and the business side of the team started to develop. The official team name, the Vegas Golden Knights, was announced on November 22, 2016, in front of thousands of fans in Toshiba Plaza in front of T-Mobile Arena.

Foley sat in on many meetings leading up to the Expansion Draft and on June 21, 2017, alongside McPhee, Foley announced picks at the NHL Awards Show in front of more than 10,000 fans at T-Mobile Arena.

In their inaugural season, the Golden Knights finished with a 51-24-7 overall record, won the Pacific Division and advanced to the Stanley Cup Final. Vegas became the first modern-era expansion team from any of the four North American professional sports leagues to start from scratch and finish first in its division.

Foley is the founder and Chairman of the Board of Directors of Fidelity National Financial Corporation (NYSE: FNF), a publicly traded Fortune 500 Company. A provider of title insurance, specialty insurance and claims management services, FNF was selected in 2004 by Forbes as one of the "26 Best Managed Companies in the U.S." and has repeatedly been named to Fortune's list of America's Most Admired Companies, Forbes' list of America's Best Big Companies and selected for Barron's list of Best Companies for Investors.

After receiving his B.S. degree in engineering from the United States Military Academy at West Point, Foley served in the U.S. Air Force, where he attained the rank of captain. He received an M.B.A. degree from Seattle University and earned his J.D. degree in 1974 from the University of Washington School of Law. From 1974 to 1984, Foley practiced law in Phoenix and focused primarily on corporate and real estate law. Following his legal tenure, Foley became affiliated with FNF. Through strategic acquisitions, Foley led FNF to become one of the largest title insurance companies in the nation, as well as to diversify into information services through the 2003 acquisition of ALLTEL Information Services, now Lender Processing Services (NYSE: LPS).

Foley devotes time to many educational and community organizations. In 1997, he was chosen as Orange County, California's Business Person of the Year, honored with the Marine Corps Scholarship Foundation's Semper Fidelis award and inducted into the Florida Council of Economic Education's First Coast Business Hall of Fame in 2006.

Foley and his wife, Carol, are active philanthropists for many causes, especially those in support of children's education. Foley has served as a trustee on the boards of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce and the Cummer Museum of Art & Gardens. He also serves on the board of the Folded Flag Foundation, and their mission is to provide educational scholarships and support grants to the spouses and children of the United States military and government personnel who died as a result of hostile action or in an accident related to U.S. combat operations. Foley's additional professional directorships include Winter Sports, Inc.; Ceridian Corporation; and Fidelity Newport Holdings, LLC.

In addition to his numerous professional and philanthropic commitments, Foley is an accomplished golfer, ranked in 2004 by Golf Digest as one of the top five executive golfers in the world. Foley enjoys his time as a vintner and is the founder and managing partner of Foley Family Wines, headquartered in Sonoma, Calif. Foley also formed and serves as Chairman of Glacier Restaurant Group, LLC, the largest restaurant business headquartered in Montana. He is the developer of Rock Creek Cattle Company, a 40,000-acre working Montana ranch, featuring a high-end golf community with diverse homesteads, a well-appointed lodge for recreation and dining and an exceptional golf course designed by Tom Doak.

GEORGE McPHEE
PRESIDENT OF HOCKEY OPERATIONS, ALTERNATE GOVERNOR

On July 13, 2016, George McPhee became the first-ever President of Hockey Operations and General Manager of the Vegas Golden Knights. On September 1, 2019, McPhee retained the President of Hockey Operations when he promoted Kelly McCrimmon to the team's General Manager.

In his current role, McPhee oversees the team's day-to-day hockey operations including development, with an emphasis on scouting, drafting, and overseeing the coaching staff. He has created a team-first culture in his short time with the franchise and has hired staff around him who share that philosophy.

The team's third season saw the Golden Knights post a 39-24-8 record (86points) and capture its second Pacific Division title in three years following a shortened regular season. The team advanced to the Western Conference Final, where Vegas fell to the Dallas Stars in five games.

During the team's second season, the Golden Knights posted a 43-32-7 record (93 points) and finished third in the Pacific Division. In the opening round of the 2019 Stanley Cup Playoffs, Vegas fell to the San Jose Sharks in seven games.

Under McPhee's guidance, the Golden Knights became the first expansion team to start their inaugural season 3-0. The Golden Knights continued their strong play in October, starting with an 8-1 record, despite losing multiple goaltenders to injury.

The Vegas Golden Knights finished their unprecedented inaugural season with a 51-24-7 record (109 points) and the Pacific Division title, becoming the first modern-era expansion team from any of the four North American professional sports leagues to start from scratch and finish first in its division.

For his efforts, McPhee was named the General Manager of the Year during the NHL Awards show on June 20, 2018. It was his first GM Award in his second appearance as a finalist, having finished as a runner-up in 2009-10 with the Washington Capitals.

Prior to the season, McPhee was tasked with putting together a competitive team in the short-term but also building for long-term success. Contributing to both of those goals was a successful Expansion Draft. The Expansion Draft was not the only place where McPhee and his staff were successful. Through the expansion process, the Golden Knights made agreements with other teams and benefited by having three first-round draft picks in the 2017 NHL Entry Draft and 13 overall picks in the draft. The team ended up making 12 selections, the most of any team in the 2017 draft.

McPhee joined the Golden Knights after most serving as a Special Advisor to New York Islanders General Manager Garth Snow in 2015.

Prior to his time with the Islanders, McPhee served as Vice President and General Manager of the Washington Capitals for 17 seasons. Under his guidance, the Capitals grew from a lottery team to a perennial contender with multiple Southeast Division championships and the team captured the Presidents' Trophy in 2009-10.

The Capitals reached the playoffs 10 times during McPhee's tenure in Washington, including six straight seasons from 2007-08 to 2012-13. Under his leadership, the team claimed seven Southeast Division titles and he oversaw the Capitals first trip to the Stanley Cup Final in 1997-98, McPhee's first season with the franchise.

McPhee also saw success through the draft while with Washington as the team held 15 first-round draft picks from 2004-13, the most of any NHL team. His most notable selection was the No. 1 overall pick in 2004, Alex Ovechkin, the league's only active three-time MVP. Prospects flourished under McPhee's direction as the Capitals affiliate of the American Hockey League, the Hershey Bears, were Calder Cup champions in 2006, 2009 and 2010.

Prior to his time in Washington, McPhee spent five seasons as the Vice President and Director of Hockey Operations as well as alternate governor for the Vancouver Canucks, assisting then General Manager Pat Quinn with all hockey-related matters. In his time with the Canucks, the team enjoyed four trips to the playoffs, a division championship, and a trip to the 1994 Stanley Cup Final.

McPhee began his playing career in his hometown of Guelph, Ont., with the Ontario Junior Hockey League's Guelph Platers, leading them to the 1978 Centennial Cup, Canada's Tier II championship. Following his stint with the Platers, McPhee attended Bowling Green State University of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association, where he became one of college hockey's most decorated players. A four-year letterwinner from 1978-82, he was the recipient of the 1982 Hobey Baker Memorial Award, given to the top player in college hockey. His other accolades included a first-team All-CCHA selection in 1982, second-team All-CCHA honors in 1979 and 1981 and his selection as the CCHA's Rookie of the Year in 1979. Earning a degree in business, he became the first player to be named to the CCHA All-Academic Team in three consecutive seasons.

Upon the completion of his college career, McPhee signed as a free agent with the New York Rangers and started his NHL career during the 1982 Stanley Cup playoffs. Following his seven seasons with the Rangers and New Jersey Devils, McPhee earned his law degree from Rutgers University in 1992.

McPhee and his wife, Leah, have two daughters, Grayson and Adelaide, and one son, Graham, who was drafted by the Edmonton Oilers in the fifth round of the 2016 NHL Entry Draft.

McCrimmon joined the organization after serving as Owner, Governor, General Manager and Head Coach of the Western Hockey League's Brandon Wheat Kings and had been with the organization since 1988-89. McCrimmon served as Head Coach from 2004-11, and 2013-16. He has helped the Wheat Kings to five Memorial Cup appearances, once as a player (1979), three times as General Manager (1995, 1996, 2016) and twice as Head Coach and General Manager (2010, 2016).

Under McCrimmon's guidance, the Wheat Kings captured 10 Eastern Division pennants and six Eastern Conference Championships. He was named WHL Executive of the Year in 1994-95, 2009-10, 2014-15, and received the Canadian Hockey League Executive of the Year award in 2009-10.

Since the 1992-93 campaign, when the Wheat Kings established a CHL record that still stands as the biggest single-season improvement of 62 points, the club has won more games than any other team in the CHL and has made the playoffs 23 of the last 25 seasons.

McCrimmon is the Wheat Kings All-Time winningest coach, having won over 400 games behind Brandon's bench. He purchased one-third ownership of the Wheat Kings from partner Bob Cornell in 1992 and assumed sole ownership in 2000. A member of the WHL's Board of Governors, McCrimmon also served as Chairman of the league's Competition Committee.

The Plenty, Saskatchewan, native played two seasons in Brandon in the late seventies and was a member of the 1979 WHL Championship club before moving on to the University of Michigan from 1980-84, serving as team captain his senior year.

BRENDAN BRISSON

Brendan Brisson's speed usually carries him past defenders as he flies down the ice.

In the offseason, his speed is used to race out the door to get to the rink for training or to meet up with friends. He passes photos on his way out of his family's Los Angeles home of family trips and holidays. They're photos he's seen before.

It took a new photo to get Brisson to stop and divert his course from the parkway to memory lane. The shot of Brisson celebrating his game-winning goal for Team USA against Canada at the 2022 Winter Olympics is new at the Brisson household and is one that captures a highlight in a young hockey career just getting started.

Fans in Las Vegas heard Brisson's name called during the virtual 2020 NHL Draft as the Golden Knights announced they'd selected the young forward 29th overall from their draft headquarters at Rock Creek Cattle Company in Montana. He stayed on the radars of avid fans as he backed up the high praise he received as a first-round pick with his impressive showings at the college and international levels.

Most recently, Brisson donned the Silver and Gold for the Henderson Silver Knights and put up eight points (3G, 5A) in seven games in the AHL. His became a name that was hard to leave out of any conversation among fans discussing the present and future of the Vegas Golden Knights.

Brisson has endured the roller coaster ride that the COVID-19 pandemic sent the entire world on. As times and systems changed to adapt to a different world, Brisson's drive to become an NHL player remained constant.

The 2021-22 season saw Brisson wear three different sweaters as the young forward suited up for the University of Michigan, Team USA at the Winter Olympics in Beijing and the Silver Knights for the tail end of the campaign.

As a sophomore for the Wolverines, Brisson set out to prove his decision to return to school was the right one after a strong freshman year in 2020-21. He experienced the challenges all college students faced early in the pandemic as classrooms become virtual, social functions went away and sporting events took place with no fans. Michigan was forced out of the 2021 NCAA Tournament due to positive COVID tests, but Brisson said the close-knit nature of the team was a reason the team was ready to compete in 2021-22.

"The only people you could hang out with were your teammates, so we just became so close," Brisson said. "It was pretty much the same team going into my sophomore year and that was probably one of the reasons we had so much success last year. I was super pumped at the beginning of the year looking around the room at all the talent that we had. We're also all best friends. It was a super good group of guys."

Brisson saw jumps in his statistical output as a sophomore with 42 points (21G, 21A) in 38 games as he doubled his point total from 2020-21. The Wolverines won the Big Ten championship and reached the Frozen Four where they fell in overtime to eventual-champion Denver. While on-ice success was a major point of growth for Brisson, it was the experience of being a student in Ann Arbor that sticks out for him under circumstances more normal – though still limited.

"We went to all the Michigan football games whenever we could," Brisson said. "The atmosphere there was just nuts. Everyone's got a Michigan jersey on and everyone's into it."

Like the men's hockey team, the Michigan football and men's basketball programs went far in their respective NCAA tournaments and the pride of being a Wolverine was a feeling Brisson plans to carry with him wherever his journey takes him.

"All of those athletes could probably say the same things as me about how close their teams were and what it was like to have the whole school behind us," Brisson said. "I'll be a Wolverine for the rest of my life."

In February, Brisson's course took him away from Ann Arbor and overseas to Beijing where he competed for Team USA at the Olympic Games. With so much high-end talent from all participating nations playing in the NHL and other professional leagues, rosters of superstars that were jotted down on paper for the Olympics were thrown out when the NHL pulled out of the games. This opened the door for Brisson to have the experience of a lifetime.

"When I found out the NHL wasn't going to the Olympics and that they'd be taking some college guys, I knew I had a chance because I was having a pretty good season," Brisson said.

In China, Brisson did everything he could under the regulations in place to make the most of the experience. Mingling with fellow athletes representing the United States allowed Brisson to learn about the different disciplines of competition and the athletes whose lives are centered around wearing the Red, White and Blue every four years. He also got to talk shop with some mega stars in the sports world.

"Representing Team USA was something really special and I learned a lot from that," Brisson said. "I had conversations with Shaun White and other freestyle skiers and snowboarders. I got to know what their sports are about and how they train. That was pretty cool."

Though the United States didn't earn a medal, the time in Beijing allowed Brisson to pick the brains of former NHLers who competed like former Detroit Red Wing Justin Abdelkader.

low fares. nonstop flights.

"He's a guy that's done everything," Brisson said. "He's won a Stanley Cup, played on the Olympic team and different USA teams, he won a National Championship at Michigan State. He told stories about all of that, and it gave me so much motivation."

Brisson said Abdelkader's tales of his own journey served as advice when season's end came around and there was a professional contract with the Vegas Golden Knights organization waiting in his inbox. Abdelkader shared a mindset that Brisson has adopted: every minute spent getting better should be done with the vision of playing on the highest stage.

With the stroke of a pen separating Brisson and his professional hockey dream, he leaned on that advice and the impression Vegas' fanbase made on him when he signed a tryout agreement with Henderson on April 12 and eventually a three-year entry-level contract with the Golden Knights on April 30.

"The Golden Knights are Vegas' team and Nevada's team," Brisson said. "That helps so much. I see the DM's I get from fans and all the support they've shown me. It really made the decision easy for me when it was time to sign that the whole city and whole state were behind me and were rooting for me."

Brisson said his big focus is on going from the wide-eyed college kid soaking in the pro experience to proving that he's ready to contribute at the highest level of hockey in the world. The heights that his hockey career will reach are still yet to be seen, but you can count on plenty of photos getting added to the walls of at the Brisson house.

MICHIGAN

As a freshman during COVID, it was good and bad in a lot of ways. You're not getting the full college experience which is why a lot of people go play college hockey. You didn't get the education and the social life where you meet new people. But it was good because the only people you could hang out with were your teammates, so we just became so close. It was pretty much the same team going into my sophomore year and that was probably one of the reasons we had so much success last year. I was super pumped at the beginning of the year looking around the room at all the talent that we had. We're also all best friends. It was a super good group of guys.

Got to start hanging out with different people this year, made friends within the business school

The alumni at Michigan are pretty successful and I'm excited to have relationships with those people.

The only part that made it hard to sign a pro contract was leaving my class and my boys. It was cool to see how six players from my class signed. It's not that normal to have a class where six guys from a class sign NHL contracts. We were all going through the same thing at the same time. Playing first games, getting feet wet.

It was cool to see my other teammates share the same experiences as me and have similar success.

When we lost to Denver, I was confident in my team. We were a much better team than that one game. We just weren't satisfied.

It was such a great experience and I wouldn't change it if I could.

We went to all the football games whenever we could. The atmosphere there was just nuts. Everyone's got a Michigan jersey on and everyone's into it.

It's different than most schools. Our basketball team went pretty far, we went to the Frozen Four, the football team went to the College Football Playoff. It was so cool and all of those athletes could probably say the same things as me about how close their teams were and what it was like to have the whole school behind us. I'll be a Wolverine for the rest of my life.

OLYMPICS

Being around the top athletes in other sports
"Representing Team USA was something really special and I learned a lot from that. I had conversations with Shaun White and other freestyle skiers and snowboarders. I got to know what their sports are about and how they train. That was pretty cool."

Being around guys who played in the NHL
When I found out the NHL wasn't going to the Olympics and that they'd be taking some college guys, I knew I had a chance because I was having a pretty good season.

HENDERSON

I didn't really know what to expect coming in. Right away, everyone was so welcoming, and it seemed like everyone was excited for me to be there.

Spent time training in Vegas last summer and saw the support for the team and the positive footprint it's left on the city in just a few years of competition.

The Golden Knights are Vegas' team and Nevada's team. That helps so much. I see the DM's I get from fans and all the support they've shown me. It really made the decision easy for me when it was time to sign that the whole city and whole state were behind me and were rooting for me.

Home Means HENDERSON

AFTER ALMOST TWO FULL SEASONS SPENT IN A TEMPORARY FACILITY, THE HENDERSON SILVER KNIGHTS HAVE FINALLY MOVED INTO THEIR BRAND-NEW STATE-OF-THE-ART HOME – THE DOLLAR LOAN CENTER.

BY KELLI PFIFFNER

THE DOLLAR LOAN CENTER

In February of 2021, the AHL's Henderson Silver Knights played their first game in franchise history just off the Las Vegas strip at Orleans Arena. When the team skated on the ice for the first time, they were met with the sounds of a fake crowd cheering and extra loud music to fill the silence. Each seat in the bowl was draped with a colorful branded banner. The only people in the building were masked employees tasked with making sure the game ran smoothly. There were no concession stands open, no lines to get in the building, no ushers checking ticket stubs. Other than the match up happening on the ice, there was nothing to signify the game day experience that we have come to know and love.

Despite the COVID-19 pandemic putting an unprecedented damper on an incredible moment for Southern Nevada sports, there was still an air of excitement in the building. For one, this was the return of live sporting events, which had been put on pause for nearly a year. And, while there wasn't a timeline for when things would get back to normal, this was the first step in that arduous process.

Secondly, the Silver Knights knew that the situation they faced during their first game was temporary – in every sense of the word. Orleans Arena, where the Silver Knights played their home games for almost two full seasons, is a venue that has a rich history of hockey in the Valley, but it was not the team's forever home. At the time of their first game, construction was well underway on their new home arena, The Dollar Loan Center.

The state-of-the-art building in the heart of Henderson is tailormade for the HSK. TDLC has 5,567 fixed seats when hosting hockey, which creates an exciting, yet cozy environment for spectators. Nearly every space in the venue is wrapped and branded with what the organization has dubbed "Modern Medieval" theming. The walls look like they're made of old wooden boards, the elevators are called "hoists," suites are referred to as "chambers," and there's even a castle on the suite level.

Flash forward to April 2, 2022, and the Silver Knights experienced their first Opening Knight that included all the pomp and circumstance that should be associated with the occasion. For their first game at TDLC, the organization hosted a Silver Carpet event on the Tiltyard, the venue's outdoor plaza area, which was the team's first real opportunity to interact with fans outside of the COVID bubble. They walked a 200-foot-long carpet, threw t-shirts and pucks out into the crowd, and even got to step on a 360 cam for photos.

"Before the game, it's tough to put it into words," said HSK forward Paul Cotter in a press conference after their first game in the building. "The organization did an unbelievable job. The Silver Carpet and 360 cam, they just outdid it. It was Vegas style for sure. It's something that we don't take for granted, and it's something that this organization brings to us. It's awesome."

Inside of TDLC, the team took warmups in front of an over capacity crowd, who brought the same energy that is synonymous with Vegas Golden Knights games.

"We've been counting the days for a long time to get into this building," said Henderson Silver Knights Head Coach Manny Viveiros in the same press conference. "We practiced here a couple times last week and just to see before the game all of the fans here – when the game started, with how loud it was, I thought I was at T-Mobile for a second. That's how loud it was. The atmosphere is incredible. It's going to be a lot of fun to play in this building."

"It was just an unbelievable experience. An unbelievable atmosphere. This is a top organization. It's really a blessing to be able to train and play in these types of facilities," said defenseman Daniil Miromanov.

The HSK closed out the 2021-22 regular season at home on April 30 with a 4-0 loss to the Ontario Reign, and then were eliminated from playoff contention after losing two games in a best-of-three scenario against the Colorado Eagles. A playoff run may not have been in the cards last season, but the 10 home games they did play at The Dollar Loan Center gave the team and their fans a lot to look forward to in the coming years.

Despite only playing a handful of games in TDLC, the in-game experience was recognized by the AHL for providing an outstanding fan experience at home games. And for the first time ever, in the 2022-23 season the team will have a full promotional calendar complete with all the bells and whistles. Fans can look forward to staple theme knights like Nevada Day and Lucky Launch, Henderson's take on the Teddy Bear Toss, and some new favorites like Lucky's Birthday and Organ Donor Knight.

One thing is for sure, this is just the beginning of a tremendous run for the Silver Knights at their new home.

BEHIND THE FORTRESS

When one steps into The Fortress, fans are immersed in an experience that's filled with bright lights, action on every corner, and a wave of electric energy that charges up the arena. The Fortress is the home of the Vegas Golden Knights, and a place where people can get the best experience as a fan. The process of creating the Vegas Golden Knights experience starts with an idea that is written onto a whiteboard and transformed into an experience that fans get to see at T-Mobile Arena. What goes on behind the scenes to bring The Fortress to life is a whole production itself.

From the start, the Golden Knights have embraced the glitz and glamor of Vegas, the show has combined the elements of a Vegas show and a professional hockey game. Vice President and Executive Producer of Entertainment and Production Andrew Abrams has been in the organization since its establishment in 2017, having a hand in curating the experience for fans.

"What makes our show different from the other teams in the league and other sports, is that we are in Vegas," said Abrams. "When we got here, I was initially part of the group to start this department. The directive we had early on from our CEO Bill Foley and President Kerry Bubolz, was to make this into a Vegas show."

With the other world-renowned shows on the Las Vegas Strip, the organization wanted to create a different experience that fans would not get anywhere else. One of the elements that the organization tries to incorporate into the show, is the family-friendly atmosphere of all parts of the show to elevate it and make it enjoyable for people of all ages. Making it entertaining for the entire family with engaging content such as fans being able to take part in trivia, intermission games like trike races on ice, to shooting pucks or dance-offs, and much more to keep everyone engaged.

The process for creating the show for each season starts in the off-season, ideas are formed and come to fruition after thorough deliberation from month after month to create a better experience for the fans. Each year that passes, there are factors that the team takes into consideration to make the show even more entertaining, and diverse to increase fan engagement to create a show that is better than the previous year. The entire organization works together to create the final product that people see in each game.

"When we are brainstorming new ideas, they all go on a whiteboard, and through time and deliberation we will hone them into one central idea that we can execute," said Abrams. "We have different members of our production team that work together. We have our video team that goes out to shoot and edit the video portions. Then our graphics team works on the ice projections, and we meld our ideas together. When we have all the elements together, we have on-ice rehearsals where we include our live actors so we can practice timing on all the elements we put together."

The pressure piles on the entertainment team as they are working against the clock to get the first official night at the Fortress in the books. Time ticks down to get all the final details done for the first show. Final rehearsals and audio checks happen just hours before fans fill the arena, and Senior Manager of Entertainment and Experience Tyler Ferraro makes sure that all parts of the show are ready for opening night.

"I say 90 percent of the time when we debut a new open, we are editing and changing up that video two hours before puck drop, down to the minute," said Ferraro. "Those things are down to the wire and that's the way we started to roll."

perform during intermissions; to the Vegas Vivas, that walk around and dance throughout the game and interact with fans. Then there are the Drum Bots that create magnetic energy to hype up the crowd. All these factors are incorporated and scheduled on a timesheet to orchestrate the elements into a final show. Each part plays a role in creating the most diverse show on the strip.

"In every game, there are over 200 individual elements," said Abrams. "Some are visible, some are audible, it's just elements from lighting to audio and the different graphics. Everything we do from every time the host talks, and every time the announcer talks, to every graphic goes on the board. That's all scripted, and people are like how do you script a hockey game that is so unpredictable? There are some points in a hockey game that you can predict."

When the final checks are in place and the fans are in their seats ready for the game to start is when the clock starts for the show to begin. The moment that the lights go out and the music starts, the entire team holds their breath and waits to see the crowd's reaction. The energy that radiates in the arena is trembling and the reaction from the fans is a thrill to the entertainment team. Giving the team satisfaction from the past couple of months of hard work that has paid off, the entertainment team gets to see the fruits of their labor.

Each game is a battle for not only the Golden Knights but everyone else in the organization that fights to make each game day memorable for every fan that steps into T-Mobile Arena. Anything is possible, and The Fortress and the entertainment team is always ready to adapt and create the best home atmosphere in the NHL.

GOLDEN KNIGHTS EMBRACE POST-PANDEMIC CLIMATE

BY GARRETT CALLOWAY

RETURNING TO NORMAL

The National Hockey League and its clubs were forced to flex their creativity in the spring of 2020, along with the rest of the globe, when the COVID-19 pandemic began to make its mark. All walks of life took a dramatic pause, and the professional sports landscape was no exception.

Coaches, players, and staff of the Vegas Golden Knights endured scenarios far different than any they previously experienced in their brief history since becoming the 31st NHL franchise prior to the 2017-18 season.

Further down the road, once the pandemic and its limitations finally began to allow some breathing room, the Golden Knights looked forward to returning to some of their key initiatives.

In the summer of 2022, Vegas hosted its summer development camp for the first time in three years. Recent draft picks and some of the team's top prospects met at City National Arena for a week of hard work on and off the ice.

"It's incredible, I'm so happy for these kids and also so sad for those groups over the previous two summers," said Wil Nichol, the Director of Player Development for the Golden Knights. "The organization does a tremendous job of giving all the players here a true understanding of what it means to be a member of this organization, on and off the ice. You can just feel the excitement from the kids, it almost feels like our first season again."

The week's excitement continued when the promising hockey prospects stepped away from the rink and visited Catholic Charities of Southern Nevada as part of their introduction to the local community. Both players and staff of the Golden Knights prepared and served meals for more than 1,000 of Southern Nevada's most vulnerable men, women, and children.

"Community is always the building block to how you get there," said Ben Hemmerling, who was drafted by the Golden Knights in the sixth round of the 2022 NHL Entry Draft just days prior to arriving in Las Vegas. "It's really important to give back and I'm grateful to be here today."

Back on the ice and later in the week, local fans packed the stands of City National Arena as the team's prospects faced off against each other during three joint-scrimmages. Cheers from the crowd and music from the in-arena staff filled the venue with energy in-between stoppages of play.

"That was incredible, I wasn't expecting that for sure," said Hemmerling of the crowds at camp throughout the week. "Even at the 8 a.m. practices, we have fans out there. It's crazy, Knights nation is unbelievable."

RETURNING TO NORMAL

All-new restrictions placed out of precaution limited the Golden Knights from being involved in the Las Vegas community, which had always been a staple to the organization's priorities since before ever taking the ice.

The organization's gradual return to normalcy continued later in the summer offseason with the return of the VGK Road Trip. The week-long bus tour made stops in Lake Tahoe, Boise, Missoula, and Salt Lake City with the goal of growing the sport of hockey and the team's fan base in regions near Las Vegas.

"It's great to come out here and help grow the game," said Golden Knights defenseman Brayden McNabb during the team's first stop of the tour in Lake Tahoe. "The kids are fun out there and we enjoy doing this stuff again."

Each visit during the trip included hockey clinics, autographs, and official team merchandise for fans in the unique markets. Golden Knights forward Keegan Kolesar met the caravan in Salt Lake City for the final stop of the week.

"It's awesome, the past couple years we haven't been able to do things like this, especially from a player's perspective," said Kolesar while on the ice. "To be able to come in, skate around with the kids, meet some new faces and see how far our team reaches out is awesome. I remember being this age as a young kid, and now I get to be in a position where I can give back."

The NHL team's new head coach, Bruce Cassidy, was brought in over the summer to get the Golden Knights back on track after Vegas failed to qualify for the Stanley Cup Playoffs in 2022 for the first time in five seasons as a franchise. Cassidy arrived in town from Boston, where he coached the Bruins to the postseason during each of his six seasons behind the bench.

"I couldn't be more excited, with a great group of players here that want to win," said Cassidy, a native of Ottawa. "Hopefully, we can all work together hand-in-hand to get us over the top."

Cassidy and his staff will look to build on the momentum established over the summer as the organization continues to take pride in getting back to its pre-pandemic fundamentals, striving to achieve success both on and off the ice.

CASSIDY

WANTS TO BRING THE CUP TO VEGAS

BY INDIA SHAY

Behind the bench stands a head coach, he's dressed in a suit with shined shoes and maybe a matching tie. Every now and then he glances down at a crumpled piece of paper with notes and then returns his focus to the ice. This coach is a good coach if he is goal-oriented, focused, and knowledgeable of the game, but he is a great coach if he is hungry for the Cup.

When Vegas Golden Knights General Manager Kelly McCrimmon was in the hiring process for the third coach in franchise history, these were attributes he was looking for in the man he'd hire to stand behind his team's bench.

The head coach position became available on May 16, 2022, and the team's search began. After 21 days had passed, news broke in Boston that Bruins head coach Bruce Cassidy had been relieved of his duties after six seasons in Boston.

During Cassidy's tenure as the 28th head coach in Boston, the Bruins qualified for the postseason in each of his six seasons behind the bench. Cassidy and the Bruins reached the Stanley Cup Final in 2019, falling short in seven games against the St. Louis Blues. In the following season, Cassidy led Boston to the best record in the NHL (44-14-12), and he won the Jack Adams Award as the top coach in 2019-20.

Cassidy had his first taste at NHL coaching for the Washington Capitals during the 2002-03 season. He coached the Capitals to a playoff appearance in his first season after compiling a record of 39-29-8 during the 2002-03 regular season. He also spent one season as an assistant coach with the Chicago Blackhawks in 2005-06.

Before joining Boston as an assistant coach and the 2016-17 campaign, Cassidy spent five seasons (2011-16) as head coach of the organization's AHL affiliate, the Providence Bruins. In Providence, he led the team to an overall record of 207-128-45 in 380 games and qualified for the Calder Cup Playoffs four times.

In addition to the on-paper success, McCrimmon was drawn to Cassidy's fiery demeanor and ability to get the best out of his players.

"His success in Boston over six years is extremely impressive," McCrimmon said. "His teams have had a clear identity, having been among the very best in the NHL. This is the right coach for our team."

Cassidy's Boston teams have always been top leaders in several key categories including penalty kill and power play efficiency, regular season points, goals for, and goals against.

"I think that it makes our team better," McCrimmon said. "It only adds to the excitement that we have heading into this coming season, and we look forward to welcoming Bruce."

McCrimmon's evaluation of Cassidy and his belief that he will bring the team success is shared by the players. The learning process that comes with a new coaching staff is one that defenseman Brayden McNabb is excited about as the team turns the page to a new season.

"I think his record speaks for itself," McNabb said. "He's a great coach."

Cassidy is looking forward to building on the team's existing strengths while also bringing in his own unique style and approach. Team identity is something that he has expressed to be a priority in his methods. Cassidy wants his players to be tough, value possession, and keep the puck out of their net. Those can be said about most philosophies around the NHL.

What makes Cassidy's approach different is the overarching emphasis on putting the team first in all situations. He believes that his players should be unified in their values and stay true to the philosophies of the club.

"If you don't have accountability, then you don't have much in you," said Cassidy. "You need the players to play for the crest on the front, not the name on the back, and still allow them to be themselves."

Cassidy's desire to instill humility in his players is not uncommon in Golden Knights culture. Since the early days of the franchise, Chairman & CEO Bill Foley has been clear: if you want to represent the Vegas Golden Knights, you'll have to leave your ego at the door. It's no surprise then that a coach who shares similar values has found himself as the new bench boss of Vegas.

The home bench at T-Mobile Arena is new territory for Cassidy. He's used to standing behind the opposing bench as he made the yearly trip with the Bruins to play the Golden Knights. A walk through Toshiba Plaza is the introduction to the festivities that are about to unfold on a Golden Knights gameday. The music, the fanfare, and the passion of the fans is on display long before the puck drops.

The atmosphere in Vegas was an annual spectacle that will now become part of Cassidy's everyday life.

"When we were first here, I'd walk out and take a peek at the pregame show," Cassidy said. "I saw the passion of the fans – they're really into it. That's a big part of the game. Players feed off the emotions, so I love that part of it."

Just as entertainment is expected at a Vegas home game, success is expected as well.

Foley has always had high expectations for his club. There's pressure from the hockey world on the Golden Knights to finally reach the goal they've been pursuing since joining the NHL. That pressure doesn't scare Cassidy one bit.

"We're in year six so the pressure is on," Cassidy said. "That's great for me – pressure is a good thing."

The Golden Knights have made their mark since entering the league in 2017, making the playoffs four out of their five seasons as a franchise. Vegas reached the final four three times and appeared in the 2018 Stanley Cup Final. However, the Golden Knights have yet to be crowned champions despite the team's quick success.

Cassidy hasn't won the Stanley Cup yet either and his eyes are locked on the prize.

In the 2019 Stanley Cup Playoffs, Cassidy led the Bruins through the first three rounds and found himself on the home bench for Game 7 of the Stanley Cup Final. Boston fell short and watched the St. Louis Blues skate the cup around his own team's home ice. The thrill of near triumph is contagious and that's a shared feeling for Cassidy and his new team.

"I think the team has a great opportunity to win a Stanley Cup," Cassidy said. "I want my name on the Stanley Cup more than anything in hockey. I think this team has been very close so that excites me. I can't wait to get going."

"Early detection gave us time to adapt together, as a family."
